北齋百物語 一 四 五 校

68

163 6

本岩さん
百物語
前北斎為
霍亭板

笑ひたんたや
百物語
前北斎為一
画書板

とんぢ小平二
百物語
前北斗笔
雇喜板

さらやしき 百物語
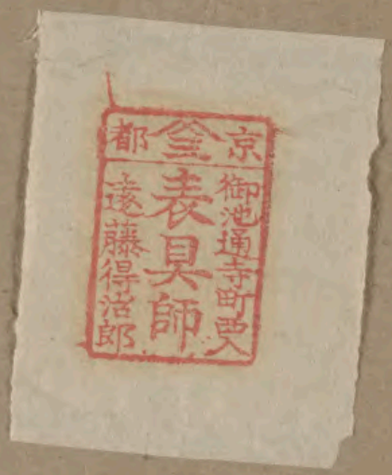
前髪奇怪
雲亭版

時ニ德天補之草
茂問爺院無嘘信云
御正月日侍哨
空

口表



白義

one of the 100 ghost stories
Drawn by Hokusai
Engraved by Kakuki

Letters on lantern reads
"Na mu Amida Butsu"
"I trust you, great Buddha"
"Zoku myo Iwa"
"Name before death Iwa"

Iwa was a rare beauty when she was married to a gallant but privolous soldier. afterward she suffered from some kind of disease which took from her all her beauty. The husband forsook her and married another woman. Iwa's tempestuous envy did not know bounds and she died a death of agony, and hatred killed by her former husband. The story goes that the ghostly figure has appeared to the happy newly married couple by day & by night, until the wife went mad & died, that made her husband mad also. etc. etc.

5 pictures out of 100 ghost story illustrations by Hokusai

One of the 100 ghost stories
illustrated by Hokusai

"Laughing Hannya"

The mask of Hannya is usually made horrible to look at with its fire-flashing eyes and wide spread mouth, completed by the two pointed horns on its forehead. It symbolizes the envy of woman. But in this picture, Hokusai departed from the conventional conception of Hannya, and drew her, exulting in the success of a hidious deed, laughting with the ~~s~~head of a lifeless baby in her hands. The effect is striking. This dues to the gisins of Hokusai

100 ~~Ghostly~~ ~~story~~ Stories
Drawn by Hokusai
Engraved by Kakuki

"Kohada Koheiji"

The Origion of this picture is ~~to~~ unknown

One of the 100 ghost stories
illustrated by Hokusai

"Shumen" Hatred which never knows bounds.

The picture shows the name tablet of the dead on the right hand, the cake put beside the death bed on the left hand, while the cup containing water given to the dying at the last moment is in the front. The snake (symboliging hatred) is coiling about those utencils

one of the 100 ghost stories
illustrated by Hokusai

"Sarayashiki" (Mansion of plates)

This picture illustrates a story which happened in a Daimyo's castle. A young soldier loved a court lady deadly in earnest and sent her letters of love incessantly which were all refused. The love of the soldier changed to hatred. Patiently he waited for a chance for revenge. There were ten plates of china which were considered the foremost treasures of the lord. one of these the soldier broke when he took it out from the ware house. He then charged the brokage to this innocent maiden. The lord's anger was fearful. He hung her with a rope over the well & cut her inch by inch, until she was finally expired. Since, it is said, there is heard a ghostly voice in that well, mournfully counting the number of plates.